Medical Instructions

Everyone included in your application, whether accompanying you or not, must undergo a medical examination with a physician on the list of designated medical practitioners. If you are a divorced or separated parent, a minor child is considered your dependent child if you have joint or sole custody, even if he or she usually lives with the other parent and is not accompanying you to Canada. You will receive instructions for the medical exam after your application has been assessed by a Canadian visa officer.

After you receive the necessary medical forms, you and your family members must undergo medical examinations with one of the doctors on the list of designated medical practitioners, unless you or your family members live in a country not included on the list. If you wish to have your medical examinations in a country not included on this list, you must inform us and we will ensure that you receive the appropriate list.

You will be responsible for the costs of the medical examination for all your family members.

At the time of medical examination, you and all family members will be required to present individual passports as evidence of identity. If each of your family members does not already have a valid individual passport, you should apply to obtain them now.

Applicants may, at any time, request that medical instructions be issued, and may undergo an immigration medical examination, at their own risk. It is important to note, however, that undergoing an immigration medical examination does not guarantee that a permanent resident visa will be issued.

The permanent resident visa has the same validity period as the medical results, that is, 12 months from the date of the first examination or test.
